

Lira is building the infrastructure for earlier recognition and better support of neurodivergence in women.

Lira for Women is a daily support app that helps users recognise patterns in energy, overwhelm, sensory sensitivity, and focus, while building self-understanding through personalised insights and self-identification tools.

Lira Professionals is a structured clinical protocol for psychologists assessing ADHD and autism in adult women, designed to improve rigor, consistency, and recognition of female presentations.

This matters because neurodivergent women are still widely underdiagnosed or misdiagnosed, often after years of burnout, anxiety, and feeling that something is wrong without knowing why.

By serving both women and clinicians, Lira addresses a major gap in the market from first self-recognition to formal assessment and care.